Objections:

1. Page 1 lines 7-8 -- "no country in the world works as hard as the United States to preserve its election integrity, a bedrock of its democratic principles."

This statement is not supported by any evidence in the proceeding. Actually, many countries do as much or more than the United States to insure election integrity. Such a conclusion would require an exhaustive comparison of all other countries to determine who works harder. It also implies that these Defendants are already working harder than all other countries on earth and thus implies that Plaintiffs' Second Amended Complaint overly burdensome. Plaintiffs' role is part of the "hard work" needed to preserve election integrity and without it, our integrity as a nation is diminished. We can accept "the United States works hard to preserve election integrity, a bedrock of its democratic principles."

2. Page 3, lines 25-27

Although the Court is reciting Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 581, 586 ('Finnie') from its preliminary ruling dated July 25, 2016, concerning Plaintiffs' Motion for Preliminary Injunction, the basis for that decision which deemed Plaintiffs' motion as moot, is inaccurate. Finnie is distinguishable. In Finnie, was a decision on a project that was put before the voters. After losing the vote, Finnie filed a law suit. Unlike here, their case was moot due to legitimate election results. Again, there was no dispute that the actions of elections officials were improper, but that the outcome of the election was not desirable to the plaintiffs. The instant case is far different in that the issue is regarding the action of the election official in his capacity and whether California law was followed, not whether some other issue can be decided due to an election. Plaintiffs' Complaint is not a contest of the election results.

The Secretary of State's certification, as mentioned on page 3, lines 15-18 was based on by the Secretary of State, which relies upon the certification of San Diego County, and all California county results, does not mean that the 1% manual tally, which is the subject of this case, was conducted according to the law, nor does it mean that Plaintiffs should have no recourse regarding the improper conduct of the Registrar of Voters in that election. As clearly demonstrated by facts not in dispute in this case, 39% of legitimate valid ballots were omitted from the scrutiny of the audit, and they also conducted themselves suspiciously in that they operated outside their own written procedures and changed the method of the 1% manual tally from batch-based to precinct-based for the VBM ballots that were included, resulting in 40 people spending a week rifling through boxes of ballots to find those that would correctly match reports of the selected precincts. This conduct was so far from what is required, that the court can and should rule that the 1% manual tally be redone in the Presidential Primary just to set the record straight and ensure there was a correct audit and certification reported to the Secretary of State.

3. Page 3, line 25 through Page 4, line 2. The court further cites Wilson v. Los Angeles County Civil Service Commission (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 450, 453 ("Wilson") to support its initial ruling that the Plaintiffs' Motion for Injunction is moot.

Wilson is also a distinguishable case. In Wilson, they considered whether a list of appointees could or could not be extended in time by the authorities involved. In that case, they apparently had the right to take that action under the law. Here, Defendants did not fulfill their obligations under the law to perform the final audit of the election and performed the audit in such a way to raise suspicions as to their motives. It is undisputed that the Registrar certified the election results without full compliance with Elections Code Section 15360, omitting approximately 285,000 ballots from review. Some of the races in that election were within 16,000 votes and could be compromised. A complete audit could unveil acts, nefarious or not, such that results of the election would likely need to be nullified. Plaintiff's assert that Plaintiff's Motion for Injunction was not to be mooted. Instead, the Court should require the election officials conduct the audit, even if after certification is complete, to underwrite the integrity of the certification.

Citizens Oversight v. Vu, et al

CASE NO: 37-2016-00020273-CL-MC-CTL Plaintiffs' Objections to Court's SOID

4. Page 4, lines 16-17 presents the definition of the 1% manual tally, stating that it "is conducted during the official canvass..."

If the manual tally is not completed according to the law, the official canvass cannot certified. By way of analogy, if a service provider was required to perform a test on their work prior to completing the contract and being paid for their work, and they did not complete 39% of the testing phase specified by the contract, the issue does not become moot simply because the contractor says the contract is complete. Testing of the product can be done at any time to validate the work done. 42 USCS § 1974 provides that every officer of election shall retain and preserve, for a period of 22 months from the date of any general, special, or primary election . . . all records and papers which come into his or her possession relating to any application, registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting in such election.

- 5. Page 10, line 3: "very single VBM ballot is counted manually." This misstates testimony. VBM ballots are validated manually but processed with optical scan machinery.
- 6. page 10, lines 14-15 "The provisional ballots are processed after the election." -- This misstates testimony. The evidence is that provisional ballots are processed after election day but before the end of the official canvass period. Lines 24-25 correctly states the evidence: "The County completes the process of counting provisional ballots by the time the results are certified."
- 7. Page 11, line 15: "75,000 provisional ballots were cast in the June election." This should read "75,000 ballots were cast provisionally in the June election, and about 68,000 were ultimately validated and officially cast."
- 8. Page 12, lines 6-7: "Vu's practice is to choose only 8 precincts, instead of 32 precincts, to develop the batches." This misstates testimony. The testimony is: "In addition to the 16 precincts chosen for the ballots cast at polling places to be manually tallied, Vu's practice was to choose only 8 batches, instead of 16 batches, to develop the set of VBM batches to be manually tallied."
- 9. Page 12, lines 12-13 "He prepared a report of the 1% manual tally from the 2008

"provisional ballot." It is not Plaintiffs' position nor Plaintiffs' request that unvalidated provisional ballots be included in the 1% manual tally, only the validated provisional ballots must be included because such ballots are, indeed, tabulated by the central tabulation system used by the Registrar. (Elections Code Section 15360(a)). Specifically, the Court states that "(i)f the Court were to accept Plaintiffs' argument that Section 15360's 1% manual tally audit procedure includes "all ballots cast" including provisional ballots, Plaintiffs are, in effect, advocating that Defendants assume the risk of including more than 100% of the ballots cast in the 1% manual tally." Plaintiffs have never thought that the 1% manual tally should include unvalidated provisional ballots. Plaintiffs contention is and has been that once the provisional ballot is validated, it is no longer "provisional" and is simply another ballot cast at a precinct and tabulated in the Registrar's central tabulation system. The presentation of evidence at trial was that the Registrar excludes the entire block of "provisional ballots" from the 1% manual tally and must include the validated ballots in the audit. (See Plaintiffs' Closing Brief, page 3, line 27 - page 4, line 4: "There were 75,386 provisional ballots cast at the 1522 county precincts, of which 68,653 were ultimately verified and counted in the Official Canvass but were not included in the 1% Manual Tally. (Testimony of Michael Vu) Thus, by the numbers, 234,000 VBM plus 68,653 provisional ballots cast at the precincts (a combined 302,653 ballots) — more than 39% of the 775,930 total votes cast — were omitted entirely from the 1% Manual Tally conducted by defendants."

27

16. Page 31, lines 23-24 "inevitable consequences of adding burden to the County's ROV, whose resources are already stretched far too thin." There is no evidence that the resources of the County or the Registrar are "already stretched far too thin" nor that including validated provisional ballots, which would amount to tallying about 2 batches of 400 ballots and consuming less than a day of two teams of workers, would demonstrably affect the budget of the Registrar. Moreover, evidence has been presented in this proceeding that the Registrar has made operational decisions that has consumed additional time, such as switching from batch to precinct mode and employing 40 people for a week to search for ballots. The inclusion of validated provisional ballots is not a

1		substantial burden which the Registrar cannot easily address. Moreover, the budgetary
2		concerns of the Registrar are not a concern for which the Court should alter statutory
3		interpretation here.
4	17.	Mandamus: On page 33, lines 19-24, the Court defers, without prejudice, from ruling on
5		the relief sought by Plaintiffs that Defendants be "stayed from certifying any future
6		election." Plaintiffs are concerned that a final ruling or judgment in this case will not be
7		timely for the November election. Election Day is November 8, 2016. The Official
8		Canvass period expires on December 8, 2016. Waiting until December 1, 2016, for a
9		"Status Conference" will effect a repeat of making any decision herein mooted by the
10		time delay. Plaintiffs would request a sooner meeting so that a final judgment can be
11		issued and filed. A "stay from certifying" is unnecessary if the Registrar complies with
12		the judgment. Moreover, Plaintiffs acknowledge that this is an enforcement issue which
13		would be requested or briefed after a judgment is final.
